Don't know if you qualify for the Free lunch Program or haven't applied for it yet? go here:

What if you can't afford the kit and don't qualify for this special program?

Here's the thing...you can get 1 or two soft B pencils like a 4B and a kneaded eraser and any pad of drawing paper, a small pack of SOFT vine charcoal, a brush and India ink, and something to use for color...can be colored pencils, chalk pastels, color markers, even watercolor...whatever you have or whatever you can afford and still be able to do EVERYTHING in this course.

I also recommend a pad of newsprint to use like a sketchbook and so you can use white chalk against the tan/grey paper. But you know what else you can use for colored paper and our mixed media assignment? Construction paper, or even the inside of a grocery paper bag. I actually collect these and hand them out when we meet F2F in class so all students get the experience of drawing on paper bags. I LOVE paper bags as a medium, and if you look online you'll find countless artists like these two below who do as well.

You can use Q-tips instead of a brush, you can make your own "ink" using espresso coffee, or beet juice.

Yup.

So do think outside the art supply store if money is tight.

I certainly don't look down on any materials since I will use ANYTHING...hair, coffee, tea, ashes from the fireplace, whatever, to make drawings. Below is my installation, No Hiding Place Down Here, commissioned by the Seattle Office of Arts & Culture. Hanging above the sculptural tent, are DIRT portraits. That's right. I used dirt collected from homeless encampments and drew with it.

This video shows me unpacking the last kit...as you can see some of the materials have changed because supply chain issues, man. It is what it is. The white paper we had before is replaced by this gorgeous Mixed Media paper pad instead.

So look at this unpacking video with changes in mind...because day by day, Covid has shifted what's available. But it gives you an idea of what kinds of things will be in our current kit. If you have some or most of the stuff, maybe you just need a couple of things to supplement.
